Get ready just in case

HOW ready are you? A new Civil Defence booklet is being distributed to make sure everyone in the North King Country is able to cope in a Civil Defence emergency.

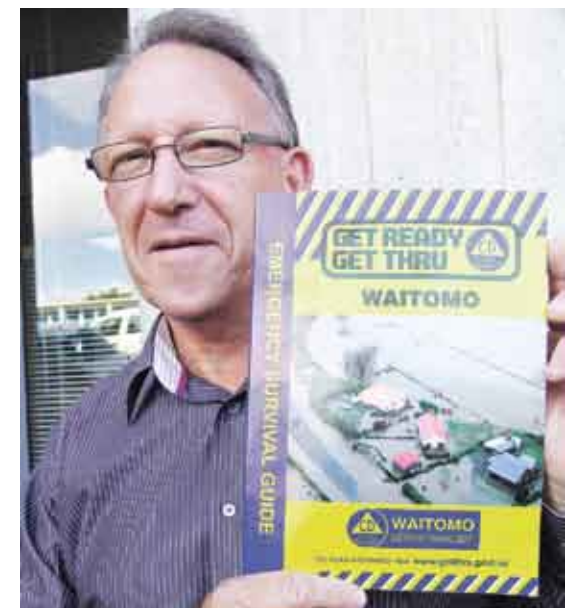

'Get ready, Get thru' is being sent to all homes and businesses in Waitomo and Otorohanga districts.

CD Emergency Management spokesman Martin Berryman says the booklet covers helpful points for before, during and after an emergency and will bring people up to date with what they need to do to be prepared.

"There are suggestions for setting up your own Survival Kit and Getaway Kit if you have to be evacuated." You can obtain most of the items you need for your kit from your supermarket, hardware store or $2 shop.

"Make a plan so everyone in your home or business knows what to do and who to contact should an emergency strike."

He says the booklet details how to look after yourself in a worst case scenario and advises what to do if there is no land or cellphone system working. It has suggestions for the elderly, disabled, animals and family pets are also considered.

"These days we are used to quick service from shops and fast food outlets," says Mr Berryman.

"But in a major emergency some communities may be isolated for days and will need to be totally self-sufficient.

"It doesn't take much to see what is happening around this country and the world to understand that natural disasters and emergencies are occurring more regularly.

"We all need to be prepared."

Civil Defence and other key agencies are now preparing community response plans for the region.
